

PinkPrincess.com Focuses on Flower Girl Dresses and Make-A-Wish Foundation

PinkPrincess.com, a popular flower girl dress retailer, also provides outfits for every special occasion in a child's life. PinkPrincess.com recently teamed up with Make-A-Wish Foundation to bring a child's dream to life. Their Cinderella Princess Costume was a dream come true for one little princess. Owner Yolanda Huang expressed her pride in being able to play a part in 'Catherine's Wish.'

Los Angeles, CA (PRWEB) July 28, 2009 -- PinkPrincess.com, specializing in flower girl dresses, recently made a dream come true for yet one more little princess. Teaming up with Make-A-Wish Foundation, they helped fulfill a wish for 3 year old Catherine Rowan. Their Little Adventures Cinderella Princess Costume helped create magical moments for this courageous child.

Little Catherine had shown remarkable bravery while receiving treatments for a brain tumor - an 'optic glioma.' Her underlying condition had been diagnosed as neurofibromatosis - a myelin sheath disorder. Catherine has responded well and everyone is positive about the future. Make-A-Wish Foundation believed that such a brave little girl deserved a special wish.

Catherine dreams of princesses and owns everything 'princess' - from a princess suitcase to a princess nightgown. Make-A-Wish Foundation granted Catherine's wish to travel to Disney World to meet Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, and the rest of the Disney princesses. When Make-A-Wish Foundation contacted PinkPrincess.com about a Cinderella dress for Catherine, they donated the perfect gown.

The Cinderella dress - with a sky blue crushed velvet bodice adorned with silver trim - was made for a royal ball. Indeed, Catherine had a ball with Cinderella and the other princesses at Disney World. She didn't want to take off her princess dress for the entire day. Shandy from Make-A-Wish Foundation expressed appreciation to PinkPrincess.com for their part in 'Catherine's Wish.'

"Catherine is a princess who made a wish to go to Disney World to be with her princess friends. Pink Princess donated this adorable Cinderella dress and she wore it in style. Once she had the dress on, she refused to take it off. She even went to sleep in it one night. Thank you Pink Princess for donating this wonderful dress."

Shandy also repeated Catherine's comments upon meeting Cinderella.

"You're Cinderella and I'm Cinderella."

Catherine's mother, Victoria Rowan, has organized a blog - Victoria's Secrets - where she hopes to spread awareness of neurofibromatosis. Everyone can therefore learn even more about Catherine's story. A PinkPrincess.com spokesperson expressed their appreciation to Catherine and her parents - Victoria and Robby - for sharing their personal story. Catherine's story was also featured on the PinkPrincess.com blog.

In response to the post, Victoria Rowan remarked,

"Wow - What a wonderful article about Catherine."
